Resolution of Audit Findings

Treasurer Gischel advised that the audit was complete and the original findings identifying an issue with a misidentified record request was modified to reflect it being a comment, not a request.

ATTORNEY'S REPORT

Status of Development Reimbursement Letters

Attorney McCarter explained that he had an initial discussion with Attorney John Albers about releasing the reimbursement funds; however, he had not followed through with any further discussion or had a resolution. Attorney Albers underscored the extreme financial volatility of releasing reimbursement funds, comparing it to "lighting dynamite." A primary vulnerability with the earlier JEDD agreements was the absence of a "drop-dead" or expiration clause. Without an explicit termination date or a hard deadline, stripping the developers of their right to reimbursement, the Board could not easily enforce a strict cutoff period. Instead, the passage of time, without corrective action, complicated the legal landscape, forcing the Board to rely on complex common-law arguments regarding contractual waivers and estoppel—contending that the developers effectively waived their rights by missing baseline submission windows. To mitigate the immediate risk of an improper fund distribution, Attorney Shook discussed the strategic merits of initiating a preemptive declaratory judgment action. Filing a declaratory judgment could effectively freeze the disputed funds safely, keeping the capital intact while a court determines legal ownership. This judicial remedy was especially critical given the scale of the financial liability. The structural variance between these agreements stems from their authorship. The first two JEDDS were drafted externally by outside counsel and contain disparate terms, whereas JEDDs three, four, and seven were executed internally, establishing a tighter, more uniform oversight framework. The immediate financial incentive for local developers was the property tax relief offered by the CRA. However, to secure the school district's mandatory approval for such high-level tax exemptions, the agreement tied the CRA to the parallel creation of a TIF and a JEDD. This mechanism was explicitly designed to capture JEDD income tax revenues and redirect them to compensate the local school district for its projected losses. Attorney McCarter indicated that the "touchstone" for what qualified as a reimbursable expense under these agreements was strictly limited to major off-site public infrastructure improvements. The original developers were tasked with an expansive infrastructure project that required building a major access corridor and installing significantly oversized water and sewer main extensions (JEDD #3). This oversized utility network was engineered to loop across the landscape to connect with an intersecting roadway to the west, thereby stabilizing and improving the utility capacity for the general benefit of the broader municipal network. He emphasized that while these off-site utility improvements historically met the high threshold required for TIF reimbursement. The developer could come back and still claim that reimbursement leaving the JEDD vulnerable should the reimbursement funds be disbursed. Attorney McCarter suggested the reimbursement funds be maintained as a cautionary measure.
